 - a touch plate with a touch-sensitive surface,
 - a network of magnetic coils in the form of a monolithic layer actuating parts to modify the tactile sensation, as a function of currents flowing in said coils so as to produce on the touch-sensitive surface a tactile sensation which is a function of the different currents flowing in each of said coils,
 - an intermediate layer placed between the monolithic layer of coils and the touch plate,
 - an addressing circuit to address currents selectively into the different coils,*characterised in that:
 - the touch plate comprises a monolithic network of tactile sensation modification components, constituted by a set of one or more blades integral with the touch plate via one or more arms,
